

Gaining Momentum: New Trends in U.S. and New Mexico Hispanic Communities

The Center for International Studies is presenting a Forum on the emerging trends among Latinos in the United States and New Mexico. The main objective is to initiate a dialogue among Hispanics, as well as non-Hispanics in order to understand significant changes taking place within US and NM Hispanic communities and their consequences for the country and the state. The Forum will be national and local in its character. The speakers will analyze new national trends, and compare them to the situation in New Mexico. The final, culminating lecture will be on the New Mexico Hispanic Community and its influence on New Mexico's identity. The Forum will be an eight-months-long self-rediscovery journey for the purpose of better understanding the changing Latino, as well as New Mexico's identity and role. Lectures will take place at the National Hispanic Cultural Center on Friday or Saturday afternoons at 4 p.m. Each event will continue for 2 – 2.5 hours and will include a lecture and then a brief break, followed by a Q&A session and a discussion. Cost: $12/person/lecture. The core events (eight public lectures and discussions) are:

- 1. September 12, 2008: Immigration: “A Perfect Storm?” Dr. Michael A. Olivas, William B. Bates Distinguished Chair in Law and Director, Institute of Higher Education, Law and Governance, University of Houston Law Center will analyze new trends and focus on states' legislation, activities and concerns related to immigration.
- 2. October 11, 2008: View from Across the Border: a Mexican Perspective Dr. Rafael Fernandez de Castro, Chair, Department of International Studies, Instituto Tecnológico Autónomo de México (ITAM) will give a Mexican and, in a broader sense, a Latin American, perception of changes within US Latino communities, as well as in US relations with Mexico and Latin America. He will pay special attention to Mexico's reaction and adjustment to the new US immigration environment.
- 3. November 8, 2008: A Portrait of the Latino Immigrant Population in the United States at the Turn of the 21st Century. Dr. Nadia Flores, Department of Sociology, Texas A & M University will address the demographic shift in the US and evaluate the situation after the year 2000 when the US census revealed that Hispanics had surpassed African Americans as the nation's largest minority group. The Pew Hispanic Center projected that by the year 2050 Latinos will make 29% of the U.S. population. The lecture will provide the answers to the questions of why the Latino immigrant population has increased during the past two decades, what have been the most recent demographic dynamics, and will address the issue of whether the Latino immigrant population currently represents a social and economic threat to the rest of the United States.
- 4. January 9, 2009: Foreign Loyalties? Hispanics and American National Unity. In his recent book Who Are We? The Challenges to American National Identity, famous Harvard professor Samuel Huntington argued that Hispanics threaten to divide American society today like no other group in U.S. history, and that they and other groups have foreign attachments that run counter to the national interest. David R. Ayón, US Director of the binational "Focus Mexico/Enfoque Mexico" project, Loyola Marymount University will examine such "transnational" ties as well as recent efforts by countries such as Mexico, Canada, Israel, Spain and Venezuela to gain influence among Hispanic Americans.
- 5. February 13, 2009: Hispanics in Politics. Dr. Valerie Martinez-Ebers, Vice-President of the American Political Science Association and Professor, University of North Texas will examine Hispanic politics in light of its increasing significance and complexity focusing on Latino direct political influence in presidential election and Latino voters. The talk will address the role of Hispanics in the 2008 Presidential campaign.
- 6. March 13, 2009: Latino Arts and Culture: Mapping a Social Movement. Dr. Maribel Alvarez, Southwest Center, University of Arizona will talk about antecedents of Latino expressive culture in the US, the Civil Rights Movement and the origins of the Latino artistic project, the nonprofit arts field, the multicultural project, characteristics that define the terrain of Latino Arts in the US; emerging trends, challenges, and opportunities.
- 7. April 11, 2009: Growing Latino Businesses. Rudy M. Beserra, Vice President, Latin Affairs, the Coca-Cola Company will address new trends in Latino businesses, such as their growth, Latinas in business, and immigrant businesses.
- 8. May 8, 2009: New Mexico: Hispanos y Mexicanos; 21st Century Immigration and the Descendants of 17th Century Indo-Hispanos Dr. Manuel Garcia y Griego, Director, Southwest Hispanic Research Institute, UNM will cover the New Mexican case and summarize the views presented in the previous seven lectures and compare national and local (NM) trends. His presentation will focus on the dual significance of the heritage of people of Mexican-origin: it is both an immigrant ethnic group descendant of newcomers to the United States and a native population whose origin is that of a racialized group identified with a territory and annexed in a war of conquest at mid-nineteenth century.
